Gay and Marked for Death

AUG. 21, 2015

Frank Bruni

AS he tried to concentrate on his final college exams, he couldn't erase the terrifying images in his head, an endless replay of a video he'd seen. It showed two men being killed — their necks noosed, their bodies dragged through the streets and set on fire.

They had burned, he told me, because they were gay.

Just like him.

Islamic extremism was sweeping through Iraq, and terror coursed through his veins. It became unbearable when, in mid-2014, the Islamic State seized control of the city where he lived. He fled, traveling furtively across Iraq for nearly a month, looking for a point of exit, finally finding one and boarding a flight to a city in the Middle East where he wouldn't be in danger.

"The greatest moment of my life was stepping on that plane," said the man, in his mid-20s, who asked that I not use his name or any identifying details, lest harm come to family members back in Iraq. "I was able to breathe again. I hadn't been breathing."

On Monday, he will tell his story at a special United Nations Security Council meeting on L.G.B.T. rights. American officials involved in it arranged for me to

Gay Men tell U.N. Security Council of being ISIS targets

by REUTERS

Syrian refugee Subhi Nahas watched in fear as the al Qaeda-linked group Nusra Front took over his home town of Idlib and began torturing and executing men suspected of being gay. Then, with the rise of ISIS, came videos of gay men being hurled from buildings.

If the victims did not die from the fall, they were stoned to death.

"This was to be my fate, too," Nahas told a closed-door informal meeting of the United Nations Security Council on Monday. The meeting was organized by the United States and Chile to draw attention to "brutal attacks" by the militants.

"I was terrified to go out. Nor was my home safe, as my father, who suspiciously monitored my every move, had learned I was gay. I bear a scar on my chin as a token of his rage," said Nahas, according to a text of his prepared remarks.

LGBT Rights Discussed By UN Security Council For First Time In 'Small But Historic Step'

The Huffington Post UK | By Sarah Ann Harris

Posted: 25/08/2015 11:56 BST | Updated: 2 hours ago

The United Nations Security Council has discussed LGBT rights for the first time in its 70 year existence, in what the US ambassador described as a "small but historic step".

The council, responsible for maintaining international peace and security, used a meeting at its New York headquarters to discuss the plight of members of the LGBT community in Iraq and Syria.

United States ambassador to the UN, Samantha Power, said: "It's about time, 70 years after the creation of the UN, that the fate of LGBT persons who fear for their lives around the world is taking centre stage".

It seems that the Iranian media closely followed yesterday's UNSC's session on LGBTI situation in ISIS-controlled area with great interest. The Iranian state-run radio and TV (IRIB) published two separate stories, one a detailed account of the yesterday's session, including quotes from Jessica (who is introduced as the Executive Director of International Fagot's Rights Commission), as well as Sunhi's testimony. This story seems to be a translation of the AFP's report from the event, and other than referring to LGBTI as fagots, seems to be factually accurate: <http://www.iribnews.ir/NewsText.aspx?ID=665354>

The second story is the coverage of Samantha Power's speech at the UN about LGBTI rights, titled, "US Envoy to the UN: The issue of LGBT should be taken seriously in UN debates." Ironically, the second story by the Iranian state-run Radio and TV uses the term LGBT, rather than fagot: <http://www.iribnews.ir/NewsText.aspx?ID=665922>

On the other hand, several conservative media, used Subhi's photo and images from ISIS killing individuals on sodomy charges and published them under the headline:

The UN Security Council Only Heard LGBT Syrians!

In these highly-editorialized stories, although the term LGBT is used (and the title of IGLHRC is actually translated accurately), but the tone of the story is that of a conspiracy theory:

Homosexuality is ruining the fabrics of the society, the West is spread homosexuality in other countries, gay marriage is the latest plot to promote homosexuality, the West and the Security Council is responsible for the situation in Iraq and Syria, the hosting of such an event at the Security Council -while forgetting the plight of millions of other Syrians and Iraqis- is a testimony to the usefulness of the UN, Syrians and Iraqis hate homosexuals as much as hate ISIS, and that ISIS' killing of homosexuals is part of the Zionists' plot to promote Islamophobia in the West. <http://www.farhangnews.ir/content/139550>
